GLT Jazz Cabaret

Talented young crooner Matt Belsante performs during an evening of sizzling jazz, sparkling champagne, and succulent finger food in a club setting at the elegant new Marriott Hotel & Conference Center in Uptown Normal.

Influenced by Ellington, Coltrane, Basie, and Fitzgerald, Belsante's music encompasses jazz, pop, and swing, reminiscent of the style of the 1940s and 1950s. His latest release Blame It On My Youth is a collection of jazz and big band standards, with some original compositions.

The GLT Jazz Cabaret creates the intimacy of a jazz club within the luxurious and upscale ballrooms of the newest hotel in Normal. You can choose from two ticket levels. Cool Jazz tickets include the Belsante performance, heavy hors d'oeuvres, and champagne on the table. Hot Jazz tickets take it up a notch by adding a pre-cabaret meet and greet, an autographed CD, a custom champagne glass, and a personal box of chocolates.

Proceeds from this event benefit the GLT Equipment Fund, helping keep your public radio station going strong.

mattbelsante

He's only 25, yet he croons like a seasoned pro. Matt Belsante is a hot, young vocalist on the rise. A well-spent childhood in Naperville, IL listening to Frank Sinatra and Ella Fitzgerald put Matt's feet on the right path to a solid career as a jazz singer. Surprisingly, though, his first instrument was not his voice but the saxophone, which he played in the school band. That was where he discovered he had a talent for singing. During his senior year in high school, Matt wowed everyone by winning the prestigious Louis Armstrong Jazz Award in both the vocal and instrumental categories. Matt says winning the awards reaffirmed his love for jazz.

Matt Belsante: That was a very neat year for me because I got to perform with a vocal jazz group as well as play and sing with the jazz band. When I went to Vanderbilt, I kept singing by joining the big band there. It just allowed me to make sure that it was something I wanted to keep pursuing, for fun or for whatever it brought.

Laura Kennedy: As a student at Vanderbilt University, you majored in engineering and economics, but not music. Why?

MB: It was not my intention to pursue music. It was something that I loved to do, but I never thought of it in a capacity where I could do it on a career level.

LK: What changed your mind?

MB: I sang with the Vanderbilt Big Band, under director Billy Adair and he was just a huge help for me. He got me connected with a lot of different people in Nashville and a bunch of opportunities came from it. I started to get more gigs and got in touch with people who were interested in making records.

LK: You're based in Nashville. What does that city have to offer a rising young performer?

MB: One of the things that I really like about Nashville is that it has the perception of just a country music town, but there's a complete variety of genres of music in the city. There's a lot of songwriting going on here, so that's another really neat thing about Nashville. I feel like songwriting is dying as an art on its own and in Nashville, it still lives on very successfully. There are a lot of people who just write in Nashville still and I think that's pretty rare compared to other cities.

LK: What about writing yourself?

MB: I have dabbled in songwriting and one of my originals was rearranged for my last record, Blame it on My Youth.

LK: You're on Twitter and you frequently post tweets. How do you feel about the Internet and these new ways to communicate, this new intimacy of posting your innermost thoughts and such. You're reaching out to your fans in a way that no one has ever done in the history of show business. How does that impact you?

MB: I think that's actually one of the huge appeals of Twitter, people can follow what somebody else is doing, even people that they hold in a different regard. The thought of being able to follow what Demi Moore is doing at any point is appealing to people. It's just the way the world is going, the marketing world, the entertainment world, it's all digital and it's all on the Web and it's all streamlined in a very unique way now. It's something that you pretty much have to be involved in in order to keep up, but at the same time, it's also something that's neat for fans because they have that bit of closeness to whomever they want to follow or learn more about.

LK: You recently tweeted that you think Val Kilmer looks like the Geico caveman.

MB: (laughs) Yeah, every time I see that commercial I think of Val Kilmer. Maybe I'm alone.

LK: No, because now I will too. I'll never be able to look at him the same again, that's for certain.

During Laura Kennedy's conversation with Matt Belsante (see interview on previous page), she asked him about the musicians who were an influence on him. Here are a few of his favorite jazz albums that clearly have helped shape his own singing style.

Frank Sinatra
Live at the Sands (Warner Bros)

I used to listen to this album with my dad and my grandfather when I was a kid. It was one of my first exposures to Sinatra and to the genre. I've definitely been influenced by Sinatra, partly because he sings all of the standards, and partly because he's just fantastic. It's hard to think of a chart that Sinatra hasn't recorded. This album specifically shows how great he was live. The Count Basie Band is second to none and they really swing as Sinatra's band on this record.

Ella Fitzgerald
Ella Wishes you a Swingin' Christmas (Polydor)

This is pretty much the only Christmas record I listen to. Most people seem to love Christmas music and this record specifically will not let you down. I actually need to upgrade to the new re-release that was issued a few years ago. I've had my copy since I was about 13 and it's just a wonderful record. Great arrangements, great instrumentation, but above all else, it's Ella. In my opinion she's the greatest vocalist of all time.

Chet Baker
The Best of Chet Baker Sings (Pacific Jazz)

This record is Chet Baker at his best and focuses on his vocal abilities. Obviously Chet Baker was a great instrumentalist, but I love him most for his vocals. He has such an honest and passionate tone to his voice. You can just feel every emotion he's feeling when he sings. It's a wonderful record from an underrated contributor to the jazz genre.

John Coltrane
Blue Train (Blue Note)

I had to include one of my favorite tenor sax players. I started with jazz by playing the saxophone. I played in jazz bands for seven years and didn't start singing jazz 'til the end of that run. I love the tenor sax and Coltrane may be the best. All of his albums are great, but this was the first one of his that I ever got, so it's a little special to me in that regard. Great record from a jazz giant.

Sonny Rollins, Sonny Stitt, and Dizzy Gillespie
Sonny Side Up (Verve)

This record is just fun. It has one of my all-time favorite versions of On the Sunny Side of the Street featuring Dizzy singing. Sonny Rollins is another of my favorite tenor players and this is just an awesome record featuring two other jazz greats.

We want your INPUT

by GLT Program Director Mike McCurdy

I presented the problem to my boss, Bruce Bergethon, with the classic "good news/bad news" scenario.

"Which do you want first?"

Bruce hesitated. "Bad?"

"We've not been paying a fee for broadcasting This American Life® on our all-news channel. It's going to cost a couple of thousand dollars a year," I said.

Taking it in stride Bruce asked, "And the good?"

"With that fee we can air any program from Public Radio International on the news channel," I explained.

The even better news for you is that you get to help choose what programs might be added. We'll use your input from the form on the following page to help decide which new programs we'll add to our all-news HD channel and stream, News & Ideas.

Some of the shows are heard weekends, some air daily during the week. Some may displace a show on HD3, but not entirely, as we air almost all of them multiple times to give you every opportunity to listen.

Thanks in advance for your rankings. Expect programming changes to take effect in mid-January 2010. Learn more about all of the programs below by visiting wgl.org.

Weekday Programs (Mon–Fri):

PRI's The World®:

One-of-a-kind global stories brought home to an American audience. Host Lisa Mullins utilizes a network of international journalists, including 250 BBC correspondents.

Here and Now

Host Robin Young updates the morning's news, adding conversations on public policy and foreign affairs, science and technology, and the arts: film, theater, music — even food.

The Strand

A truly universal guide to art, culture, and entertainment from the BBC. Discussion, updates, and reviews of the best books, music, art and design, film and television, digital arts, and theatre.

Weekend Programs:

WireTap

The Toronto Star describes WireTap as "[pitting] the absurd against the plausible." Each episode swings back and forth between This American Life® contributor Jonathan Goldstein's monologues and phone chats with funny storytellers. Goldstein gleefully welcomes all eavesdroppers.

Bob Edwards Weekend

Is there a more recognizable name in public radio? Edwards hosted NPR's Morning Edition® for nearly 25 years. In this two-hour interview showcase, he highlights the life and work of interesting people, from newsmakers, historians, and authors to artists, actors, and regular folks too.

Living on Earth

As the population continues to rise and the management of the earth's resources becomes even more critical, host Steve Curwood examines the issues facing our increasingly interdependent world.

The Student Fans of WGLT group on facebook

by GLT Student Announcer Danny Hajek

Students both in high school and college always look for something that will intrigue them – something new and unique that they can relate to. Mainstream media does not always fulfill this need with Top 100 charts, commercial interruptions, and lack of originality. Fortunately, the constant search for an 'alternative' that provides young people with a mix of entertainment and interest led me and many of my fellow students to 89.1 & 103.5 FM, WGLT. With a mix of jazz and blues, and shows like Wait, Wait... Don't Tell Me!, Sound Opinions, and This American Life, students are able to connect and relate to programming in ways that only public radio can provide.

Not only does GLT provide the kind of smart, entertaining programming that appeals to today's college students, they actively seek our input. The Student Fans of WGLT group on Facebook is a place for students to come together and discuss the station's content while keeping up on the latest programs. It's updated weekly with program schedules, links from wgl.org, and upcoming events, including pictures and videos taken by the GLT Staff.

We welcome students to join our group if you or someone you know is interested in the station and wants to connect with a community of other student fans of GLT.

Go to facebook.com and search for "student fans of WGLT".

iPhone™, Meet GLT

Say hello to the best portable public radio experience available. Use the apps described on page 13 to morph your phone into a radio. Then you can:

- Listen to GLT live, anywhere you are
- Ditto our Web streams, GLT Blues Radio 24/7, and our all-news channel, News & Ideas
- Hear (or read) NPR News on the hour plus breaking news coverage as it occurs
- Share stories via Facebook, Twitter, and e-mail while you're listening
- Pause, fast forward, or rewind audio
- Enlarge accompanying images
- Create a playlist of NPR stories to hear in any order or to save for later
- Listen to GLT audio while browsing text stories
- Customize your phone for instant access to your favorite GLT and NPR offerings, including our podcasts
- Cache text and photos for viewing offline
- On the road, connect with the nearest public radio station and its broadcast schedule in a heartbeat

There are a host of public radio apps at the iPhone™ store, free for the taking. We are particularly entranced by two: the NPR News app and the Public Radio Player app. You can learn more about each of them online and even take video tours. Learn more about the NPR News app at www.npr.org/services/mobile/iphone. ### Main Street Yoga

How does it look from your plateau? You know, the place where you are in your life. Sometimes we all wonder how to reach that next step. Debra Risberg, owner of Main Street Yoga in Downtown Bloomington says, "Try yoga!"

"Yoga is part physical and part mental exercise, which opens us up to new achievements," says Debra. "Among other things, yoga improves fitness, assists with pain management, relieves stress, and helps you develop a positive outlook."

Debra opened Main Street Yoga in 1996 as a way of reaching a new plateau in her own life. She had started taking yoga classes at IWU and was soon tapped to teach, because of her affinity for the discipline. That led her to seek out more education and instruction from The Kripalu Institute in Massachusetts, among other places.

Along with yoga, GLT is also a big part of Debra's life. "GLT has been on my radio since I first moved to Normal and I've never changed the dial!" says Debra.

Often Running

The biggest misconception about Often Running in Uptown Normal is that the shop only caters to marathon or 'serious' runners.

"That couldn't be further from the truth," says manager Mitch Hobbs. "Our average customer is the person who runs 10-20 miles a week or less. That's people getting into, or back into, running or those getting more serious about it."

With 27 years of experience in helping runners of all levels, from casual to marathoner, Hobbs knows his stuff. "We can help anyone get the right equipment to prevent injury and make running more enjoyable. We're enthusiastic about what we sell. Helping people is our favorite reason for being in business," says Hobbs.

Hobbs has seen the sport gain broad appeal across gender and age, and has helped countless beginners get started. "Runners put a lot of thought into their routine and so do GLT listeners," Hobbs says. "We support GLT for the same reason we support running groups. It's good for the community."

Mitch Hobbs
